Projects

#2822: Project Eagle: MassEcon, Massport, and MOBD were assisting a Chinese company that is one of the world's leading manufacturers of solar cells and solar panels. The company was evaluating locations to establish its first manufacturing facility in the U.S. to serve the US market. The company was considering existing buildings of 750K-1.4 million SF or land sites to build-to-suit.

Notes: Massachusetts is no longer being considered for Project Eagle. MA and New York have both been eliminated due to high transportation costs of getting raw materials from Asia. Nevada and Arizona have both made the short list. California is the primary market for the finished product.

#2834: Project Daisy: MassEcon is working with a Washington, D.C.-based location consultant representing a world-leading global technology company. The client is looking statewide to purchase an existing 750K SF facility with expansion potential for advanced manufacturing. Five hundred new jobs total in the areas of production, engineering, management, and maintenance. Commencement of operations in 2018, full operations in 2020.

Staff in Action

Susan Houston's June was focused on launching the Annual Conference, planning for the Summer Reception, supporting key committees, and continuing to develop an outreach plan for the UMass-MassEcon's location intelligence study. Susan, along with Doug, attended a briefing hosted by JLL focusing on Related Beal's new lab project, Innovation Square in Boston.

Doug Kehlhem participated in the Marlborough EDC strategic planning session. He also exhibited at the Newton-Needham Regional Chamber of Commerce business expo, along with other state partners. This month, Doug will be attending the Medical Design and Manufacturing trade show in New York and the BIO International Convention in San Diego.

Annie O'Connell worked to execute the Annual Conference and is gearing up for the Members Meeting/Summer Reception by preparing the mid-year report. She is also researching companies for the Economic Impact Awards. Annie recently attended the "University and Privately-Sponsored Business Incubators and Collaborative Workspaces" event in Lowell hosted by NEDA and MEDC.
